Contractors interested in working on the Enviva pellet mill construction project have an opportunity to meet with the Enviva construction team on Thursday, January 9. Enviva is hosting a meeting with potential contractors as part of its commitment to use local contractors and people, according to George County Communications Director Ken Flanagan. The meeting will be a “come and go” format between 1 and 4 pm at the George County Senior Citizens Building.

When contractors arrive, they will be directed to the appropriate table or station where an Enviva manager and/or engineering firm representative will outline required contractor qualifications and provide information important to the bidding process.

“This will be an opportunity for local contractors to meet and engage in conversation with the construction manager about future timeframes, requirements and availability,” Flanagan said.

Appointments are not necessary. Interested parties need only to make an appearance between those hours.
